When you are feeling ill, especially if you are a cold, it seems that chicken soup helps to make you feel better. However, doctors have found no scientific explanation for this. The good thing about chicken soup is that it is loaded with valuable nutrients, such as proteins, carbohyrdrates, minerals, vitamins and water. Chicken soup isn't a medical cure for a cold, but it reduces some of the annoying cold symtoms. It definitely is a delicious, comforting meal that supplies your body with water. To get the full benefits, of course it must be a homemade soup with only natural ingredients, such as carrots, onion and parsley. The classic chicken soup is made by boiling chicken parts in water with various vegetables and grains like rice and barley.
